The parks in NSW are so full of wild dogs I no longer feel safe to take my family there to camp and experience nature due to the fear of a wild dog attack. I also have changed my dream of owning a farming property in the high country as I know the cost and disaster the wild dog population is causing on current local farms.

The dingoes have breed with feral domestic pig dogs and hunting dogs and has combined to create a super breed of feral dogs much larger, much more aggressive and cunning. They are not like the old dingoes who generally kept away from people as they have mixed with other breeds they are not scared of people and brazenly come close to campsites and houses. The devastation these 'super feral dogs' causes is disgusting. And the Government has been culling Brumbies in the masses which has helped the wild dogs breed up in huge numbers. If the government cared at all about the highcountry and parks they would be trapping and shooting the dogs that they falsely call dingoes. They are nothing like dingoes. The absurdity of the government officials running the parks is a disgrace to our nation. They lock it up and then watch it disintegrate in the summer bushfires. Shoot the dogs, shoot the pigs, let the cattleman back in, let people use the space to camp, fish, hunt, and catch brumbies. The brumbies population has been obliterated so leave them alone and focus on the feral animals that actually do the damage. Pigs, deer and dogs.
